Tus case of the commonwealth vs. John Barker, for grand larceny, was dismissed without trial at the instance of the commonwealth, there being no evidence to sustain the charges in the warrant, the property which he was charged to have stolen having been found in the Intermont hotel, where it had been for some on J. M. Willis & Co. for French time. Mr. Barker has heretofore always sustained a good reputation for honesty and it is with pleasure we do this act of justice, which will fully vindicate him to his many friends and the public generally.

The Revival Service.

The revival service still continues at Trinity church, in the hands of Revs. Straley and McManaway. Much good has been done, and the two churches-Methodist and Baptist-are moving along together in the great cause of soul salvation with perfect unity of purpose.

The result of the meeting so far has been fifty to sixty professions, with quite a number of accessions to the two churches. Such work between churches looks like genuine Christianity, and goes farther to impress on the minds of sinners that there is truly something in the great cause for which they are working than all the doctrinal sermons that could be preached between now and domsday. The meeting will doubtless continue for

Saturday evening Mr. Hudson put his horse in the stable and fastened the door on the outside. Mr. W. C. Thompson also had his horse in the same stable. It is thought that some one opened the door and turned the horses out, and through pure unadulterated, unpardonalile meanness ran the horse on the bridge simply for the fiendish desire to see him kill himself by falling through the timbers.
